

Public domain photo

As wind power expands and becomes a dominant energy source, the challenges associated with it grow too: the presently biggest hurdles to overcome are the low electricity prices caused by wind power and the much too complex permission processes for new construction; in other areas, solutions have been implemented, such as for bird protection and recycling of components.

